

DREW DUDLEY

INTERNATIONALLY-ACCLAIMED LEADERSHIP SPEAKER, AUTHOR & EDUCATOR

ARE YOU COMFORTABLE CALLING YOURSELF A LEADER?

Drew Dudley has asked that question to hundreds of organizations around the world. Fewer than 1% of them have had half of their audiences raise their hands. That's a problem Drew aims to solve through his presentations and engagements.

When people are empowered as leaders they make better, faster decisions. They collaborate more effectively and they're far less likely to leave your organization.

Audiences leave Drew's keynotes believing they're leaders. More importantly, they leave with a clear road map on how to act like leaders. Drew teaches a form of leadership to that's tied to who we are and how we behave through use of a system of personal accountability that's linked to higher levels of engagement, productivity, pride, and happiness at every level of an organization.

THE PRESENTATIONS*

Drew's collection of presentations are the engine for helping your audience to feel more engaged, productive, and impactful everyday. His powerful stories and practical insights have helped to shift the narrative around this topic away from power and influence to a more practical focus tied to who we are and how we behave.

In addition to two core presentations that help individuals to be more conscious and instinctive about creating impact daily, he offers four supplementary presentations to help them navigate change, uncertainty, failure, collaboration, and conflict on their journey.

Each presentation can stand alone or function as part of an integrated series of interventions. Choose a single presentation that provides your audiences the quickest route to engaging in leadership today or implement a series of interconnected engagements that address the ongoing challenges to their daily impact over time. It's up to you!

Presentations are available in-person, virtually or pre-recorded.

THE LEADERSHIP TEST

A ROADMAP TO IMPACT

View the presentation

Employee engagement is one of the predominant challenges affecting businesses today. Recent data suggests that higher workplace engagement leads to better outcomes including a 17% increase in productivity, a 20% increase in sales, and a 21% increase in profitability. Being purposeful about fostering a more inclusive, impactful form of leadership within your organization increases employee engagement. It empowers them to make decisions aligned with their values, inspiring trust and driving positive impact.

In this presentation, Drew Dudley introduces a system of accountability called The Leadership Test that enables individuals to apply this form of leadership to their lives and careers. Rooted in behavioural psychology, the Test functions both as a blueprint for empowering audiences to behave impactfully everyday and generating evidence about why they matter while doing so. Drew demonstrates the power of the Test in helping to drive positive personal and professional growth through stories and insights derived from living six core leadership values: impact, growth, courage, empowerment, class, and self-respect.

Sharing insights from leaders of all types — CEOs, elite athletes, cab drivers, custodians, and everyone in between — this presentation will change the way you think about leadership in your life, workplace, and community.

THIS IS DAY ONE

CREATING CULTURES OF LEADERSHIP

When a group of prominent researchers first set out to discover how effective leaders behave, they found those individuals consistently engaged in a series of exemplary daily practices. They also concluded they scored 110% higher on measures of overall leadership effectiveness; were ranked 140% higher than those who didn't demonstrate the same practices; and scored 135% higher on measures of trust by the people who worked for them.

In this presentation, Drew Dudley teaches audiences an actionable process to model these exemplary practices and achieve the same measured results. Targeted at “culture creators and enablers” within an organization, audiences will gain a clearer picture of how to use values and action-driving questions to make normally unconscious behaviors a more consistent part of their lives and careers. In doing so, they will be better equipped to engage with their lives and work in a more positive, meaningful, and impactful manner.

Honest, engaging, and above all useful, audiences will leave this presentation having gained clarity on how to lead with purpose and move the leadership narrative away from power and influence towards a more inclusive form centered upon who they are and how they behave.

COURAGE

LEADERSHIP IMPACT IN ACTION

In nearly every industry today, people have been affected by unprecedented social and economic disruptions that have negatively impacted their perceptions of work. These uncertainties have created fear and hampered productivity. One recent report, for example, even suggested that absenteeism is 37% higher and productivity 18% lower because individuals are concerned about major shifts in their jobs (or the loss of their jobs entirely).

In this presentation, Drew Dudley provides practical strategies for addressing this fear and restoring productivity. He will discuss the fundamental differences between confidence and courage; share a process for systematically overcoming fear; and provide a decision-making framework that helps individuals stand by the decisions that scare them the most.

This presentation is an ideal choice if you're looking to provide your audience with the insights necessary to make positive, momentum-building decisions when their instincts tell them to "wait and see."

ELEVATE, DON'T ESCALATE

LIVING WITH CLASS AND LEADING WITH IMPACT

Unhealthy conflict is a major source of frustration and discontent in the world. One-third of employees, for example, say it leads to personal attacks, with one-in-five saying it causes illness or absence. Even worse is the fact that nearly 85% of those employees deal with unhealthy conflict for an average of 2.8 hours per week. That represents approximately $359 billion in paid hours each year.

In this presentation, Drew Dudley offers tips for addressing some of the most common sources of interpersonal conflict between people and teams. These include a solution-focused approach to problem-solving; how to effectively address the role fear plays in conflict; and a simple trick for avoiding the most frustrating aspects of email communication. Each strategy reinforces the importance of elevating (seeking solutions) over escalating (attempting to win).

If you've ever sworn at your computer because of an email or find your fists balling up thinking about a co-worker, this presentation will be ideal for helping to save careers and relationships.

THE GAME HAS NO WINNERS

GROWTH, EMPOWERMENT, AND LEADING BEYOND AN ECONOMY OF SCARCITY

The adage 'individuals don't typically leave commitments, they leave people' is somewhat outdated. Recently, individuals are also abandoning their commitments in droves because of toxic team cultures. Toxic cultures almost always emerge when leaders reward individual over collective achievements and prioritize the bottom line over the people who deliver it.

In this presentation, Drew Dudley offers audiences' strategies for fostering a culture of leadership based on care instead of toxicity. Dispelling the notion that leadership is destined for those who are committed to outmaneuvering and outperforming their peers, Drew demonstrates that acting selflessly is the most effective way to foster loyalty amongst teams. Audiences will discover the value of being an 'indispensable teammate' in cultivating that commitment.

A practical lesson in how to create and sustain a culture of collaboration while striking the right balance between autonomy and accountability, this presentation is ideal. If you're seeking to demonstrate/reinforce the power of supporting others to add-value and achieve collective goals.

SELF-RESPECT

THE FOUNDATION OF LEADERSHIP

Employers today are facing a crisis of confidence amongst their employees resulting in higher resignations, staffing shortages, and “quiet quitting.” 44% of employees today, for example, say they currently experience “a lot” of stress versus the previous day with 25% saying they felt worried, angry, or sad. People simply can’t work at their best if they don’t feel safe. Employers are thus increasingly seeking to leverage health and wellness initiatives to navigate change and uncertainty in their workplaces.

In this presentation, Drew Dudley offers audiences several simple yet transformative leadership strategies for embedding self-care strategies and cultivating resilience and psychological safety into their daily routines. Through powerful stories that recognize the difficult parts of life and work with humour and compassion, audiences will discover how to close the gap between the person they are and the person they want to be without compromising their happiness, fulfillment, or work-life balance.

This presentation is a great addition to your agenda if you believe your audience could benefit from a reminder that they are not alone in their frustrations and fears and that taking care of themselves is an essential part of feeling engaged and connected every day.

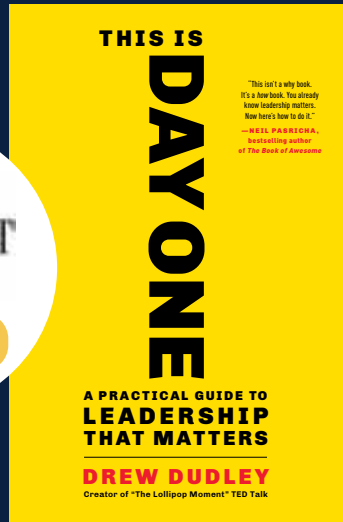

THE EXPERIENCE

Drew's keynotes are considered among the best in the world, and they set the stage for deeper, continuous learning by the audience—ensuring the energy and commitment someone feels at the end of his presentation translates into real behavioural change.

His presentations are accompanied by a suite of personalized leadership development tools that will continue to impact audiences long after he's left the stage. These include an internationally best-selling book and multitude of follow-up workshop sessions that enables the audience to revisit his message and implement the Day One process at their own pace.

More than a speaker, Drew provides resources to help organizations facilitate long-term professional development for their employees, students or volunteers.

I have a problem with most leadership books. They scream from mountaintops. They quote superstars. And the authors play the role of preacher on a pedestal. But Drew is different. The pedestal has been kicked away. The superstars replaced by everyday people. And what shines through? The magical wisdom of life changing stories on how we can be better people and live better lives. This isn't a why book. It's a how book.

BESTSELLING AUTHOR OF THE BOOK OF AWESOME AND THE HAPPINESS EQUATION

THE BOOK

Based on his TEDx talk “Everyday Leadership (the Lollipop Moment)”—voted one of the 15 most inspirational TED talks of all time—This Is Day One is Drew’s guide to cultivating the behaviors that will help individuals to succeed and empower those around them.

An international best-seller that debuted at #6 on the Wall Street Journal bestseller list, This is Day One was also ranked #2 on the “Best Business Books of 2018” list by retailer Chapters Indigo and was long-listed for the CEOReads Business Book of the Year Award.

By simplifying leadership without denying its complexity, Drew demonstrates that leadership in all its forms begins at the same clear and accessible place for everyone: what he calls “Day One.”

Sharing the process that led him through battles with alcohol, obesity, and personal tragedy, Drew shows readers how to develop a relentless commitment to the daily behaviors that will make them a better executive, coach or teacher—and how they can inspire others to do the same.

THE FOLLOW-UP SESSIONS

The best way to personalize Drew's Day One Leadership experience is by supplementing his keynotes with follow-up workshops that can take place immediately following his presentation or in the weeks and months that follow. Mixing innovative simulations and activities with structured debriefs and reflection, these highly interactive workshops allow participants to practice and apply the concepts Drew outlines in his keynotes. Ranging in length from 2-hours to two days, participants will leave these sessions having:

- Engaged in a deeper, collective examination of the values they use to guide personal and professional decision-making.
- Translated those values into everyday behaviors.
- Created action-driving questions to motivate the use of those behaviors.
- Strategized for some of the daily challenges that could stand in the way of behaving impactfully.

MORE ABOUT DREW

Somewhere around the middle of his undergraduate education, Drew realized engaging with the world was a lot more fun than writing papers about it.

While still a student he became heavily involved in Canada's largest post-secondary charitable initiative in support of Cystic Fibrosis Canada, eventually serving as the National Chair of the organization. As he moved into his career, he took on the challenge of creating and building the Leadership Development Program at the University of Toronto, which became the largest and most dynamic in the country.

It was those leadership students who changed the course of Drew's professional life: they secretly organized a campaign to put him onstage at TEDxToronto 2010, where he delivered a talk that would go on to generate more than 5 million views around the web. A high-achieving lifestyle took its toll however: undiagnosed bipolar disorder set the foundation for binge eating and drinking, and Drew grew to over 300 pounds while struggling with the emotional challenges of a career that kept him on the road 250 days a year.

Drew credits the Day One process with saving his life—he began applying the process to improving his mental and physical health. Recognizing how many people were struggling silently with similar battles, Drew began infusing these experiences into his keynotes, hoping to remind people that their scars in no way stand in the way of their leadership.

In 2018, Drew shared both his story and the Day One process in his first book This is Day One: A Practical Guide to Leadership That Matters. Today, Drew continues to travel the world sharing the Day One process with organizations of all kinds—aiming to redefine leadership for as many people as possible.
